Practice Tests Student's Book

This is one of a series of three practice test books written and designed for EFL teachers preparing their students for the national foreign language exams in English, leading to the state certificate of language proficiency (KPG). Work for this series has been carried out within the framework of the project entitled “Differentiated and Graded National Foreign Language Exams” (Greek acronym DiaPEG), which is co-financed by the European Union and Greece, with the purpose to support and further develop the national foreign language exam system of Greece. More specifically, it has been carried out as a deliverable of subproject 10, entitled “Linking foreign language education in school with the national language exams,” on the basis of which a similar series will be produced for the German and Spanish exams.

EXPLORERS

A In Scotland there are many lakes, which are called 'lochs'. One of these is Loch Ness in the north of Scotland, 37 kilometres southwest of the city of Inverness.

B Loch Ness is a long, narrow loch with cold, deep water. It is more than 38 kilometres wide, 230 metres deep, and it is very big as it covers an area of 56 square kilometres. It is the second largest Scottish loch by surface area, but, because it is very deep, it contains more fresh water than all other lakes in England and Wales.

C The water in the loch is very cold and not very clear so it is difficult to see anything under the surface. Some people think there is a monster in Loch Ness, known as "Nessie". Many have tried to see her, but there is no definite evidence yet that she exists.

STUNT PERFORMERS
THE 'REAL' SUPER HEROES

Would you jump off a tall building? Would you run through a blazing fire? Would you ride a wild bull? Of course not! These are things we only see in movies. The question is 'Do actors do all these things?' Well, no. The truth is it is stunt performers who do all these things for them.

Stunt performers are the heroes who thrill and excite us all. They act instead of the actor in films when the scenes become too violent or involve too many risks. So, when the right time comes, it is the stunt performer who jumps from roof-tops, climbs cliffs, jumps over crocodiles or skydives. It just looks as if the actor is doing it.

Of course, it's not easy to be a good stunt performer. You need to have many different skills and important qualities. Stunt performers are usually brave, well balanced, very well trained and strong.

Although stunt performers are a 'must' for action films, and they are the ones that make many films unforgettable, it is sad to know that they usually go unnoticed. We never see their names or their faces, and nobody gives them prizes or awards. For example, have you ever heard of the best stunt performer award?

Since the film industry owes so much to stunt performers, isn't it time they were recognized for the work they do?

EX. Dangerous movie scenes are usually played by

The Great Fire of London

The old city of London was a dirty city with narrow streets and wooden houses. It was Sunday, 2 September 1666 when a fire broke out at Thomas Farrinor's bakery near Fish street, in Pudding Lane a little after midnight. The fire continued the next day and the next and the next...It burned house after house, building after building and people lost their houses and put up tents in parks for their families and any things they could save. On Tuesday 4th they decided to blow up the houses to make a firebreak, a gap to stop the fire. On Tuesday evening the wind dropped and, finally, on Wednesday 5th, after four days, they put out the fire. The Great Fire of London destroyed about 13,500 houses, a lot of other buildings and the most beautiful church in London, St. Paul's Cathedral. Luckily, only about eight people died in the fire. The Londoners built a new city. The houses were made of brick or stone, not wood. The new streets were wider and cleaner, too. Sir Christopher Wren, a famous architect, rebuilt St. Paul's Cathedral and put up fifty new churches. Today, tourists can see 'The Monument to the Great Fire of London' (or simply 'The Monument'), a stone column which is 61 metres tall at the place where the fire started.

WIKIPEDIA

Can readers write their own encyclopedia? Believe it or not, they can! This is what Wikipedia is all about. The people who write for it are people like you and me, not lexicographers, teachers, or university professors.

Wikipedia is a free electronic encyclopedia with information about anything you can think of and you can find it on the Internet. Born in 2001, now it has more than ten million texts, in about two hundred and fifty languages! Two million of these are in English.

To write, add or correct information, you simply click on the text and do it. Anyone can add anything, any time, for as many times as he or she wants.

Today, there are more than seventy five thousand Wikipedia writers around the world and statistics show that they make about 1.000 changes per hour. Up to now, about 700 million visitors have actually used it.

Wikipedia is amazing! Readers add information to it 365 days a year. It is a 'live' encyclopedia but you need to remember that not all information you can find in it is correct. Sometimes the information you find is not right because nobody checks to make sure that what readers add is correct. So, don't think that it can replace a real encyclopedia in the library or from an electronic site.

EX. The text below is probably from

- A. a history book.
- B. an instructions leaflet.
- C. a teen magazine.

37. Wikipedia is an encyclopaedia

- A. written by experts.
- B. created by readers.
- C. made for English readers.

38. Wikipedia

- A. costs nothing.
- B. is an electronic game.
- C. appeared thirty years ago.

39. The Wikipedia texts are

- A. in five languages.
- B. in English.
- C. in different languages.

40. Millions of people

- A. use this encyclopedia.
- B. buy this encyclopedia.
- C. find this encyclopedia useless.

41. The information in the encyclopedia is

- A. never correct.
- B. always helpful.
- C. in no way complete.
